

AWARENESS & REFLECTION IS POWER

Something Joyously Important to Share

By Alexandra Browne-Hill

If you had something important to share with the world, what would it be? What are you most passionate about? I have always noticed oddities and things not spoken about. As a child I had "known" things. When it came time for me to follow my career as a nurse for example, I noted strange things happening in the old dark wards of outdated hospitals. My passion is the sharing of evidence that we are Souls. We do not die but rather we pass into a flow of beautiful energy which allows visits to loved ones and assistance for those remaining on Earth.

I have a son who lives with God and he provides me with the most extraordinary verifications. At 6 years old Kieran first told us that he would have a short life. He requested we not cry for him after he left us. This moment of horrible realisation, feeling frighteningly true in my solar plexus, was repeated before Kieran actually left the planet. Lessons regarding Soul survival featured in my life and began the foundations of my faith in a Universe that is powerful and cosmically grand. Kieran was always present in my lessons.

Discovering the presence of other Beings through my studies, travel to Sacred places and meditations provided experiences I couldn't dispute. Inexplicable evidence was no longer in contention with my western mind. Developing an awareness of loving guidance and connection with our natural Home helps our potential to rise above the lower human state. The easiest way to connect with something greater than ourselves is to lift the vibration of our love. Like a radio frequency, our innate antennae can pick up messages from far away if we are in alignment with the energy of the Greater Loving Beings.

With lessons from my son demanding my attention I soon picked up methods of connecting with him and communicating. 'I promise,' I told him, 'I will work on our method of discussion and find a way to reach you always.' He has assisted me in many ways. I studied hard and practiced grounding, connecting to Loving Light and protecting my energy. Now I work with him assisting others to connect to their Higher Selves to receive their own guidance. It brings a major source of peace and contentment to be authentically a Soul in a human vessel.

We are complete when connected to our innate wisdom, intuitively aware of energy around us and within us. We function well naturally when understanding the bigger picture. As Souls with emotions and a body, we connect to our "Home" for love and support. It matters not what that looks like individually. With this process engaged and affirmed as a truth, we feel more hopeful, loving and healthy. I am grateful to my teachers on the Other side for the life I enjoy now. There is much to learn and feel gratitude for. Evidence is abundant when I stop to notice. This is what I would share.
